The Cowboy Cheered by Thousands as He Starts.

Around the World on the Back of a Bronco.

Young America was out in full force this morning to see Cowboy Tanner mount his bronco "Gip" in front of the Pulitzer Building at 10 o'clock, and start on his trip around the world in the saddle.

Youths with wild Western ambitions, from Harlem to the Battery, from Brooklyn and Hoboken, crowded into Park Row a half hour before the time Tanner was to appear, and watched eagerly to see the man they all envied.

ballots and some who may have voted for every President since Andrew Jackson's time were on hand to see a real live cowboy, with enough of the love of truth in his heart to say he had never had an adventure.

A brief study of the man from the plains was reserved, however, for the lady who look upon every man riding a bronco as a hero, and who were active in their admiration.

"Gip" was feeling as gay as her master, and pranced around in Park Row as though pleased with the prospect of a long ride. The boyish enthusiasm of the earth and a ride across the seas.

Her iron-gray coat was well curried and her eye as bright as a diamond.

She stood restlessly on the hard cobble stones, but Tanner said that when he rode out to meet the roads will be more like Western plains.

Shortly before 10 o'clock the wandering cowboy stepped from the Pulitzer Building, mounted his bronco, and off he went.

The little pony had been crowded into Frankfort street, and it was all Tanner could do to push through to where he had left it.

"Here, shake hands," said one of the most persistent young Americans, and as he did so a thousand other hands were outstretched, and the tongues were crying, "Shake here," and the cowboy from the plains for the first time in his life learned what a wonderfull thing it was.

Just then he was almost carried from his feet by the rush, and, grabbing his pony's mane, was pulled to her side, and, with a yell, the pony, swinging himself into the saddle and rode through the gap that seemed to voluntarily open.

Every one cheered, all waved their hats, and as Tanner acknowledged the ovation by removing his big white sombrero there was a shout almost as loud as the roar of Cleveland reached the top of the ladder, leaving Harrison away down below.

Tanner rode to the Cortlandt street entrance to Jersey City and then to Newark.

During the extremely warm weather he will travel principally at night, following the route as given in yesterday's "Evening World."

O'NEILL OPERA TROUPE DISBANDS

Professional Jealousies Cause a Disruption at Charleston, S. C.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 20.—The O'Neill grand opera company, organized in New York last April, and which has been playing a successful engagement here for six weeks, collapsed last evening.

The company had two prima donnas, Miss Berlina Humphreys and Miss Delaporte. A cabal, it is alleged, was formed between Miss Humphreys and Miss Delaporte, in which Ritchie Long, the tenor, and Max Herschfeld, the director, are interested. The manager, Mr. Arthur O'Neill, demanded his pay for last week. O'Neill claimed that the company was to be paid during Tuesday. Herschfeld, therefore, refused to conduct the opera, and the manager announced that the director having refused to perform his duties, the company was disbanded and all salaries forfeited.

YOUNG MANZANELLO PUT AWAY.

His Father Said to Have Taught Him to Be Thief.

Justice Goeting, in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day sent Michael Manzanello, seven years old, to St. Dominic's home.

Despite the boy's tender years he has been arrested on several occasions, and the police say that he is as well trained a little thief as there is in Brooklyn.

He was born in Brooklyn, and was arrested on a charge of stealing $300 from the till of a grocery at 24 Richardson street, and it was then alleged that the boy was taught to be a thief by his father.

Owing to the boy's youth he was not prosecuted, and when an attempt was made to prosecute the father it was found he had disappeared.

For the last week young Manzanello has been roaming the streets, and in course of time he was convicted of vagrancy.

COLUMBIA NOT READY FOR HER TRIAL.

PROVIDENCE, June 20.—The Rogers syndicate yacht Columbia will not make a trial trip to-day. The little alterations that have been in progress since her initial trip are not yet completed, and the work is being done with all possible despatch.

Flagship Royal Arthur at Victoria.

VICTORIA, B. C., June 20.—The Royal Arthur, the new flagship of the British squadron, from the Pacific, has arrived at Esquimalt, from Portsmouth, England.

HART'S CHARGES ENTERTAINED

The Bookie's Three Police Assailants to Be Tried.

Inspector Williams Hears the Complaint This Morning.

Frank R. Hart, the bookmaker, of 451 East Eighty-fourth street, the man who alleged he was brutally beaten and clubbed by several policemen of the East Eighty-eighth street station, early yesterday morning, was at Police Headquarters to-day.

Inspector Williams consented to see Hart, and after listening to his story, which was told in "The Evening World," was obliged to take a complaint against Policemen Isaac Milhauser.
